 The many favourab notices of this splendid book would fill a volume; the following are a few extracts:—

"This work is one of those rare productions of art whic once extort admiration and defy criticism. It is not only the most splendid work of the kind that has yet been attempted in England, but it is, we believe, perfectly unique, and opens a new provinces in the region of decorative art to the student and amateur. The windows at Gouda, unanimously allowed, by the best judges and ablest connoisseurs, to be the perfection of that kind of painting, and of unsurpassable beauty in regard to execution and colouring."—Times.

"This is, in every sense of the word, a splendid book. The part of the volume devoted to an account of Albert Durer and his works is particularly interesting, and is the fullest and best notice of him we possess. Many magnificent specimens of painted glass are given, the plates measuring twenty inches in height, and richly coloured in imitation of the originals. Certainly more splendid examples of glass-painting could not be found. To conclude—the book is in every way worthy of the patronage, and adds another to the long list of princely works produced by private spirit in this country."—Art-Journal.

"This publication is as splendid a "Prachtwerk" as has ever been produced in this country—one so truly magnificent in every respect, that it must throw the admirers of mediæval art into ecstacies."—Morning Herald.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

Morning Post.

"A superficial description utterly fails in conveying any ad quate notion of the elaborate research that must have been required for the compilation of these volumes, of the value of the suggestions that they embody, or of the archæological knowledge which the author has brought to bear on the subject of his disquisition. Some of the plates are in outline, but many are coloured, with a carefulness of touch and brilliancy of effect altogether unusual, all are so accurate as to be available, if necessary, for working models, from having been drawn to the scale."

Guardian.

"The present work supplies a great deficiency, and treats the subject in such a way as is likely to be useful and interesting at once to the antiquary, the amateur, and the practical artist. Much confusion has hitherto arisen in treatises on glass painting from an ignorance on the part of the writers of the practical details of the art. This objection will not apply to the present work, for it contains a clear and succinctly detailed account of the process pursued in the different systems of glass-painting, the characteristic features of which are distinctly pointed out.

"The plates have been evidently most carefully selected, with a view to show the progress of the art from the thirteenth to the seventeenth century, and in execution and getting up are inferior to none which have hitherto appeared."

"Every visitor to the Crystal Palace desirous of making more than a casual acquaintance with its varied treasures must have felt the want of a Guide like this, which is at once precise and popular. Unlike the formal 'Catalogue,' the 'Handbook,' as to express ourselves, perambulates the edifice, marking the most noticeable groups and giving just so much information about them as enables the spectator to study them with advantage.... When completed the whole will form an excellent popular account and memorial of the Exhibition."—Athenæum.
